The China Trade. -(From the " London and Guina Herald.")

We are happy to eay, in so far as the trade of China and Japan is concerned, at all events, that the inevitable turning point in the dreary. mercantile depression for some time prevailing, has at last been reached. The export of cotton manufactures to China has of late heen large. These have been purchased at advantageous rates, and as the raw material in Ohina is very door, the competition of native manufactures will not form an element of opposition, and the prospects of profit are good. The Liver-pool Cotton market has attained a healthy from an average advance of $d. baving been established during the month of January ... A avourable reaction has occurred in Manchester, which han created a material change in the aspect and condition of the market since the and of the year. After a period of hopeless depression, thickening gloom, and rainous forebodings, this great market for manufactures seems to have emerged into a mach led to state of buoyancy closticity, and confidence. Rates generally have advanced, the buver and not the seller being the convasser. Ten bas improved materially, common Congous (the description run upon by the Licensed Vic-tualiers) having advanced 11d. from the lowest point. The clearances are enormous. Silk has likewise participated in the improvements, rather unexpectedly we abould suppose. The shipping interest is favourably reported m. During January there was an active demand for tonnage, and in many directions higher freights were obtained. Other interests remain prostrate, but should war be averted we tope that the favourable indications we have nentioned are the beginning of a return to a degree of confidence which will lead to the profitable employment of them suormons hordes of wealth which have been lying for many months almost profitless. Writing Habits of Literary Men. Mr. Charles Dickens's favourite time for ocially composition is said to be in the morning, when he writes till about one or two o'clock; then he has his luncheon, and walks out for two may is, hours, returns to dinner, and entering. Nonehours, returns to dinner, and either goes out or times his method of labour ismuch more ratent bone and unremitting. Of his delightful Obrintmas book, "The Chimes," the anthor says, in a letter to a friend, that he shot himself up for a wonth, close and tight over it. Lord among Lytton (Bulwer) accomplished his your anally productions in about three hours a day, usually reldom later, writing Lython (Bulwer) accomplished his voluminous several all with own hand. Composition was at first ve lec very luborious to him, but he give himself eadulously to mastering its difficulties, and is ropolia said to have re-written some of his briefer prod in its He writen very rapidly, averaging, it is said, hand's tweaty nearen pages a day. He says of himorn of at five, dire at six, and gut through the erening as I hest may sometimes by correcting a proof." The following account of the late Donglas Jerrold's "mothed in writing" was akotched during his lifetima by a friend who knew him well :- At eight o'clock he breakfasts, then reads the papers, cutting out bits of news. The atudy in its furniture is of solid oak. There work begins. f it he a comedy, he will now and then walk rapidly up and down the room, talking wildly Oriental rapidly up and down the room, talking wildly which to himself, and laughing as he hits upon a good point. Suddenly the pen will be put of Galle, down, and through a little conservatory, with ompany out seeing anybody, he will pass out into the garden for a little while, talking to the gardences, walking, &c. In again, and vehenicatly bave in to work. The thought has come ; and in letters go and a smaller than the type in which they shall be set, it is unralled along the little bine aline Alexan. of paper.
